

Value for money: Formosa 520 with Suzuki 90

WAYNE KAMPE
BRISBANE

wayne@waynekampelyfishing.com.au

The day for this review was a shocker. It was February, with a strong wind warning in place from forecasters and a massive cloudbank looming from the east threatening rain. But, as they say, the show must go on.

Kieran Harland of Coastal Powerboats had made the effort to be at the ramp on the Broadwater at 8am so we launched and headed off into the chop to do our best, grey skies and all.

OUTSTANDING RIDE

The 520 Formosa centre console did offer some comfort in that it had a huge amount of freeboard for a craft of its size, a small windscreen for wind deflection on top of the console plus a bimini to deflect rain when it came. Within a few minutes, as we headed straight into wind driven chop pushing down the channel behind Sea World, I was to discover more.

This craft had an outstanding ride. Formosa have created a winning formulae here as the 520 features a bow entry designed to cut into waves, while a spray chine above the water line also serves to keep water well away from the bow area. The result: a ride that is both dry and easy on the backside.

Even after around an hour of running up and down the Broadwater the only moisture within the craft was drinking quality stuff that came from the clouds.

ANGLER-FRIENDLY LAYOUT

The Formosa 520 offers ample work area in a set-up that makes fishing a pleasure. Five anglers, from nearly anyplace on the boat can fit without much bother. Up front there is an open anchor well equipped with bow roller and a T-bollard with a split bow rail low enough to be unobtrusive. A pair of anglers could easily work up here, and an icebox with padded lid doubles as a seat. There is also an underfloor storage hatch below the icebox, which was quite handy. Could you ever have too much storage area in a centre console rig? I doubt it.

This shot of the Formosa underway gives an idea of the craft's ample freeboard.

The Formosa's deluxe fore/aft bolster seat is an effective way of providing flexible seating arrangements.

The padded icebox is an ideal seat for a front passenger and can take care of the catch as well.

The remainder of the craft and the elevated front cast deck is carpeted for sure footing.

The 520's centre console was equipped with a simple but effective dash area and also offered mid-shelf and floor storage space, a strong outer grab rail, and was hinged just below the screen for ease of storage in the garage. Forward controls for the 90 Suzuki on the transom were meter, were on a lower section, with switches and marine radio lower again.

While seated on the well-padded two person fore/aft bolster seat behind the console I noted that the console was wide enough to offer shelter for two of us provided we tucked in close but for normal running around I was happy enough to stand braced against the console while searching for a fish to throw a lure at in the Seaway.

Wide and well-formed side pockets are easily accessible for gear such as gaffs. A pair of rod holders adorned each 30cm fully welded side deck while a good-sized live well was set up in the bait station, which also came equipped with a cutting board and additional rod holders.

Despite the angler-orientated features the seating was not neglected. A three-person drop down bench seat was set up at the transom, the aft coaming forming a neat backrest. This style of seat makes

Cont... PAGE 131

The Formosa's deep anchor well is serviced by a large bowsprit and bow roller.

Want to save MONEY?

www.solast.com.au

